Message from Everett H. Bellows

Chairman, GW Board of Trustees

t the time of his retirement on June 30, 1988, Lloyd Hartman Elliott will have devoted 23 years to raising this university to a place near the top of American higher education. We are most pleased, therefore, to devote these pages to a fond retrospective look at the Elliott years.

Capitalizing on our superb location in the heart of Washington, President Elliott has led the university through difficult years of change and growth. Today, GW has emerged to approach the 21st century with significantly upgraded facilities, high academic standards and a solid financial base.

Indeed, gauged by every yardstick that measures educational institutions, the progress made during the Elliott era has been remarkable. One has only to look about the campus to see the fruits of his years of effort, abundantly apparent.

At a recent GW convocation, Washington Post writer Jonathan Yardley looked at the Elliott era in somewhat different terms. He noted that "President Elliott stands out among university presidents not merely for the depth and breadth of his accomplishments, nor for his longevity in office, but for the selflessness with which he has served." Yardley concluded that Dr. Elliott "has served the institution rather than the man" and that the effectiveness of that service will long endure.

In short, Lloyd Elliott's legacy to this university will be, simply, its future. I am pleased to have this opportunity to pay tribute to his leadership, and I know I speak for a great many friends and colleagues when I say a heartfelt thank you and farewell to this exceptional chief executive, this able advocate and true friend of higher education.

Halfway to $75 million: Dr. Elliott and Chairman Bellows (r), celebrate midpoint of the "Campaign for GW."

The Elliott Years: Profile of a Presidency

"When George Washington urged the establishment of a center of learning in the nation's capital, did he dream that someday the world's heartbeat would be centered on the banks of the Potomac? Did he foresee even then that the university must serve as the world center for the serious critical pursuit of truth and knowledge?"

Lloyd H. Elliott Inaugural Address Feb. 21, 1966

e may never know. The secret of George Washington's dreams and visions nearly 200 years ago — when he selected a site just south and west of what is now GW for a national university — has long been a subject of conjecture.

That the visions of Lloyd Elliott are more knowable leads to an inevitable question: Did President Elliott have in mind to do, when he arrived here in 1965, the things he has done since? Was there some grand design?

He is not one to be coy: "I really felt at the time and I feel as I look back that I knew where I was going....I have felt — I hope not arrogance — but I have had confidence."

It was confidence that received a severe test in the very first month of Dr. Elliott's presidency. Finding GW in a kind of limbo after a time of rapid and in some cases unexpected leadership changes, Dr. Elliott had no choice but to make a "river-boat gambler's decision." As he recalls,

Trustees Chairman E. K. Morris admires the ceremonial medallion of the Great Seal of the university.

"In the early fall of 1965, the question came to me as to whether or not we would authorize the construction of what was to become the Jacob Burns Law Library. A three-year fund-raising campaign had yielded only $190,000 toward the goal of $1.5 million. And the question to me was whether we put the brakes on the plans for awarding the construction contract, effectively saying, 'no, this is not enough money to guarantee that we can pay off the mortgage....'But I said 'let's go ahead, let's build it.' And then, quietly and to myself, I thought: whether we ever get it paid for or not remains to be seen, but the campus community has to have some demonstration that we can do something."

loyd Hartman Elliott was elected 14th president of The George Washington University at the June 5, 1965, annual meeting of the university's Board of Trustees. He was chosen to succeed the late Dr. Thomas H. Carroll, who had died suddenly in July 1964.

It is no exaggeration to say that Dr. Elliott hit the ground running. Monday, September 20, was officially his first day of work at GW, but a week earlier — September 13 — he had made brief remarks to freshman orientation. Then he had set out at once to meet his new colleagues; within a short time he had visited the office of virtually every member of the faculty. In the early days of his administration he also consulted formally and informally with members of the Board, officiated at law school centennial convocation ceremonies, and spoke at the medical school's opening assembly. Off-campus, he ioined an impressive number of important Washington-area higher education and community groups.

learly, Lloyd Elliott had arrived — at GW, and in Washington. In a sense it was where he'd always been headed. A native of Clay County, West Virginia, he was graduated at age 18 from Glenville State College — where he had met and married fellow student Evelyn Elder (known as "Betty" throughout the couple's ongoing, 50-plus year partnership). Dr. Elliott began his career as a teacher in the public schools of Widen, West Virginia, and after wartime U.S. Naval service — which included command of a tank landing craft wrecked in a storm during the invasion of Sicily — he completed his doctorate in educational administration at the University of Colorado.

Soon after the end of World War II, Dr. Elliott was appointed an assistant professor at Cornell University — and within four years had been promoted to full professor. After ten years at Cornell that included several administrative posts, the University of Maine beckoned and he accepted that institution's presidency, a position in which he served for the seven years immediately preceding his election to the presidency of GW.

Although he came to the university in the autumn of 1965, Dr. Elliott was not officially inaugurated as president until the 1966 Winter Convocation — February 21, 1966. The by-invitationonly ceremonies were held in one of Washington's best-known auditoriums, the spacious and venerable Constitution Hall. The convocation itself bespoke the importance of the occasion, and full academic regalia, pomp and formality were abundantly visible. The event was momentous for both man and institution, marking the outset of a dynamic and enduring collaboration.

It seems appropriate that his first big gamble at GW involved a library, since the condition of the university's libraries was the source of early frustration to Dr. Elliott. Arriving at GW after seventeen years at Cornell and Maine, his first look at GW's libraries was a shock:

"In July 1965, on my first really extended visit to the campus after I was named president, university Librarian John Russell Mason took me for a tour of old Lisner library. He was a very active man, small in stature but quick of step. We went through the stacks, climbing over piles of books and manuscripts and monographs and somewhere along the way he turned to me — kind of exasperated — and said, 'Dr. Elliott, we can't buy any more books because we don't have any place to put them.' And I could just see students rummaging through all of those books and papers and not being able to find anything they were looking for. And it went through my mind, though I said nothing, how inadequate is this library for this kind of a student body in this day and age. And I said to myself that something had to be done about it. Later, I visited the medical library down at the old medical school at 13th and H — it was unbelievable. And the law school library was on the fourth floor of Stockton Hall — one room with a cage around it, where you checked out the books at a window. You walked up four flights of stairs to get there. That day was my low point in 20-plus years at GW."

hy then did this 47-year-old academic administrator, obviously en route to a brilliant career, want this job? Confidence again comes into the picture, but this time it was Dr. Elliott's confidence in the institution — and in its location.

"I felt then that there was a great future for this institution," he explains; "without knowing the details of GW's situation in 1965, I still had confidence that there was a place here in the nation's capital waiting to be filled. And I wanted," he continued, "to be involved with a private, independent institution. Somehow, I never had any regrets."

Earlier, during Cloyd Heck Marvin's 32 years as president (1927-1959), GW had changed from a relatively small institution to a far more complex university. Between 1959 and 1965, however, the institution's progress stalled. An acting president (Oswald S. Colclough) served until 1961, when Thomas H. Carroll was appointed 13th president of GW. But when President Carroll died suddenly in 1964 after only three years in office, Dean Colclough once again was pressed into service as acting president.

During those six years, a leadership vacuum developed, and by 1965 indecision reigned. A concerned group of faculty leaders did not hide the considerable skepticism with which it viewed the ability of the outsider — Lloyd H. Elliott — selected by the Board of Trustees as GW's new president. As Dr. Elliott recalls today, "Most of the faculty shared my belief that GW was a university in the right place at the right time. They just were not convinced that I was the right man!"

And so in late 1965, Lloyd Elliott found himself president of an institution beset by shaky morale and significantly lacking in the three essentials of a top-rank university: excellent facilities, financial strength and overall superior academic quality. The institution's major physical and financial weaknesses were obvious; and although many areas of real academic strength existed, the institution as a whole could not compete academically with the nation's best universities.

n October 1965 he told an interviewer that he considered GW's major assets to be its location, its people and the opportunity available to it as a free, privately endowed university. And, although the effectiveness of Dr. Elliott's early leadership would soon dispel most faculty doubts about him, he saw other severe tests ahead. "A strengthened financial base is urgent," he said. "New academic programs . . . are now standing in the wings awaiting adequate financing. Additional facilities, better salary schedules and the expensive equipment of modern education all await and in fact are dependent upon the assembling of new and greater financial resources," he told the interviewer.

Although GW's physical facilities were far from first-rate, Dr. Elliott and many faculty members believed that at least the institution had the benefit of an excellent location. Indeed, many of GW's most distinguished faculty members had come to Washington because of their government ties. Such linkages augured especially well for GW programs focusing on the broad spectrum of public policy issues. A symbiotic relationship had always existed between the university and the federal government; Dr. Elliott's plan was to capitalize on that relationship, to build upon it for mutual benefit. Meanwhile, other priorities demanded attention.

with the Perkins and Will plan, but they had not approved it.

Earlier, from his Cornell vantage point, Dr. Elliott had viewed Columbia University's profitable experience with real estate — specifically, Rockefeller Center. Thus predisposed to favor the plan, he discussed it with then-Treasurer Henry Herzog, who also was already convinced of its wisdom. Dr. Elliott and the trustees quickly came to agreement, and the foundation for GW's sound financial base was put solidly into place.

Those properties now constitute more than $100 million of GW's total endowment of over $200 million — a figure that puts it among the top one percent nationwide. (When Lloyd Elliott arrived at GW in 1965, the university's total endowment was less than $9 million.) The market value of the properties is high; given a few years and the continued growth of the Washington economy, this portion of GW's endowment could rise to a very sizable figure.

Small wonder, then, that when asked if it is true that GW owns a good deal of property, Dr. Elliott replies "Yes...but not enough!"

o less impressive is the record of the last twenty years with regard to construction of major facilities needed for academic or other student-use purposes. The importance of these buildings to GW's quest to become a truly top-rank institution would be difficult to overstate. Of special significance is the fact that the construction of these academic facilities has been financed substantially as a result of the income derived from the commercial buildings. GW has built two million square feet of commercial space, and two million square feet of academic space. In this way, one building builds another.

The first of the new buildings to be completed was the structure that was soon to become known as the Jacob Burns Law Library, completed in 1967 (subsequently renovated and expanded in 1984).

Soon thereafter came the new student center — The Cloyd Heck Marvin Center, which opened in the winter of 1970. No real student center had existed at GW. Associate Provost Marianne Phelps recalls, "One of the first building commitments Dr. Elliott made was to a university center. He felt it was a high priority; space for student activities was sorely needed. The very positive benefits the university center has brought to the entire campus community have proven the wisdom of this decision."

Later that year construction was completed on the first major academic building of the Elliott years, now named Funger Hall. With its 172,000 square feet of space, Funger Hall houses classrooms, auditoriums, and offices; it also is home to the School of Education and Human Development.

The new university library — which was named the Melvin Gelman Library — was completed in 1973. Designed to have five times the floor space and more than three times the seating capacity of the old library, it also would accommodate almost three times the number of books of its predecessor — the same library through which Dr. Elliott had clambered, in growing despair, only eight years earlier. The Gelman Library now houses more than 1 million volumes and recently qualified for membership in the Association of Research Libraries, a premier group. The year 1973 saw completion as well of the university's new medical school building and medical library — Walter G. Ross Hall and the Himmelfarb Health Sciences Library — conveniently adjacent to the university hospital, replacing outdated facilities at 13th and H Streets that had housed GW's medical training program for some one hundred years.

In the years that followed, GW completed a number of renovations and several other new buildings, including the Charles E. Smith Center for Physical Education and Athletics (replacing a decrepit GW legend, the "Tin Tabernacle"); the Academic Center (with its three major halls — Smith Hall, Rome Hall, and Phillips Hall); and the National Law Center's Theodore N. Lerner Hall.

Law school buildings and library... medical school building and library... classrooms... offices... athletic center... student center. One can fully grasp the significance of these vastly improved facilities to the future of GW only by considering their vital importance to the university as a whole.

Lloyd Elliott is quick to point out, however, that the university made progress on the academic front as well. "We didn't stand still academically while building our financial base and physical plant," he points out. "The first thing we had to do was to recruit faculty, and to do that we had to raise faculty salaries. When I came I told the Board of Trustees that the salary scale was not competitive; this was not very sweet talk to them." But raise them he did — to a point that in January 1970, GW had reached the American Association of University Professors' "A-Scale" in all faculty ranks in every category. This accomplishment was especially meaningful at the full professorial rank, which never previously had reached that height.

he president makes no secret of what he feels is the inextricable nature of the relationship between academic excellence, strong finances and modern facilities. "It was not until the three things could go forward together with some balance that we were really behaving as a university," he says. "You can't invite a professor from Columbia University or from England to join your faculty without having at least a comfortable place for that scholar to work, or without having excellent library facilities." When Lloyd Elliott came to GW, the university had three endowed professorships; today there are twenty.

Among these, the 1980 creation of a new faculty rank at GW, that of "University Professor," was one more signal that the university was moving into a new era. Through this most prestigious academic rank, GW has brought to the campus five internationally respected scholars whose contributions go beyond the boundaries of any one academic discipline, thus providing an integrating influence across the campus. Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick S. French praises Dr. Elliott for that innovation and others — such as launching the Division of Experimental Programs, participating in the National Endowment for the Humanities Challenge

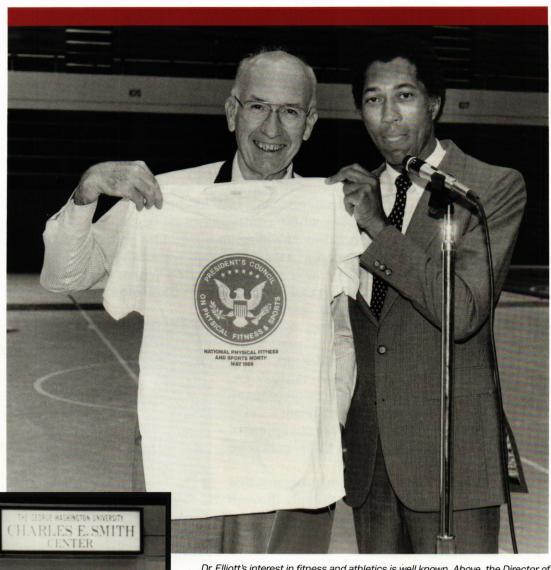

Grant program, and encouraging development of distinctive research and teaching in the field of policy studies. Dr. French is particularly impressed by another Elliott trademark. "The president's philosophy of leadership," Dr. French remarks, "is one that places great confidence in deans and department heads....Dr. Elliott has created an excellent environment for academic growth under their collective leadership."

GW has long been noted for its programs that contribute to the community, primarily through service or artistic enrichment. But community contributions can come in diverse packages. One unique program inaugurated in 1969 endures to the present — GW's highly successful Educational Opportunity Program. The program, initiated in response to a proposal by GW's Black Students' Union, offers tuition remission grants to graduates of D.C. secondary schools who meet minimum entrance requirements. In approving the program, Dr. Elliott went beyond the commitment of time the Union had proposed and authorized an "indefinite commitment, not limited to five years, with the expectation that all students admitted under tuition remission grants will continue to hold these grants as long as they remain in good standing or reach graduation." The president's confidence has been fulfilled; attrition in the program has been low, and to date GW has graduated several hundred EOP students.

Dr. Elliott's interest in fitness and athletics is well known. Above, the Director of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, Dr. Matthew Guidry, in 1986 bestowed on Dr. Elliott a Council certificate honoring his contributions to physical fitness and sports.

r. Elliott's characteristic broad view influences his relations with GW students, a relationship he calls "upbeat, affirmative and optimistic." He does not fret about the perennial complaints over food, long lines or registration snafus. What concerns him is the substance and quality of the students' educational experience: "The cherry blossoms will come and go and the hoopla of Washington will come and go but when those students come back after 10 or 20 or 40 years, it will be GW that is high in their book and in their memories." Dean of Students Gail Short Hanson thinks that many students who see his public person as being remote are surprised to find his private person not at all "stand-offish." She says, "Students who've encountered him in a small group setting express surprise . . . . He's funny and very engaging, and they come away saying 'this is a nice person. I'm sorry I didn't know him before."

She also sees the president as a person who "gets through whatever it is he has to get through." She recalls an expressive arts festival that Dr. Elliott came to visit just as a dance therapy group was beginning. The dance therapist grabbed his hands and pulled him into the circle, "and soon Dr. Elliott was skipping along to this wild music, holding hands with others in the group," Dean Hanson says. "There he was in his grey suit and red tie . . . but he got through it."

vents national and international thrust President Elliott into a public role early in his administration. He came to GW early in the anti-Vietnam war protest movement. And in this case GW's location was a negative. The president of GW had to deal not only with his own students' protests but also with thousands and thousands of students from all across the land who marched on Washington.

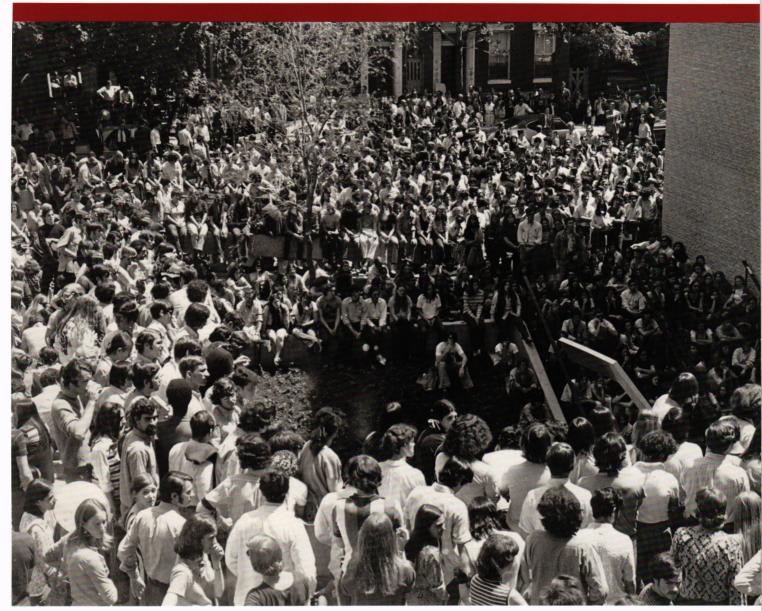

Dr. Elliott himself calls those days "hellish." Early on he exchanged private phone numbers with both the mayor and the police chief of Washington; often they had late-night strategy conversations. Dr. Elliott's primary concern remained the education of GW students: "... We cannot allow the passions of the moment to prevent us from providing an education for our students," he said amidst the turmoil. He also found a practical way to solve the problem of campus security: he

"The protests were extremely stressful times. In retrospect, there was no way of avoiding confrontation and no effective way of resolving conflict. He is a man of strong character; he stood up and took what he had to. And he NEVER lost his cool."

Associate Provost Marianne Phelps

hired the retiring chief of the Washington office of the Secret Service to be GW's director of security. The president is grateful for faculty support in that period. He says, "During all those days and years, on all the important questions, the faculty supported the administration, and vice versa. We were on the same side."

It is not surprising that, in the years that have followed, many institutions have tried to lure President Elliott away from GW; he elected, however, to stay the course here. In 1984 he took a major step toward ensuring that the institution would continue on the high road he had chosen for it. He appointed the Commission for the Year 2000 and charged its members with studying GW's mission and programs and with recommending new program directions or emphases that would place GW among the leading universities of the world by the year 2000. The report of that commission is now being implemented.

Being in Washington was sometimes a mixed blessing at best. During the Vietnam era, the city attracted crowds of students from near and far. Here students gathered at GW in May 1970 in tribute to slain Kent State students.

The commission's report led to the initiation in 1985 of the Campaign for George Washington, the largest fund-raising effort in GW's history and the first to focus exclusively on academic excellence. Characteristically, Dr. Elliott undertook this new challenge energetically. In less than two years, the Campaign had raised one half of its five-year goal — at which point Campaign Chairman Oliver Carr commented, "Lloyd Elliott has been the heart and soul of this campaign. His total commitment is an inspiration to all of us."

On the "up" side of being in the nation's capital: Dr. Elliott and GW freshman Gene Sullivan lunch with Maine Sen. Edmund S. Muskie in the Senate Dining Room.

n his heart of hearts — and notwithstanding his great accomplishments for GW that are related to dollars, bricks and mortar — President Elliott has remained an educator. In 1965 he perceived that the only way the university could become a superior educational institution was by acquiring the resources necessary to attract the very finest in talent and to buy the very best in equipment. That he has been incredibly astute, and incredibly successful, in putting those resources together is beyond question. But in the process, he has continued his daily quest for knowledge and wisdom about education and the university's role in society. His interest in education is global, not provincial. And when he speaks his mind, he speaks plainly.

"Freedom is the key," says Dr. Elliott, "the element that must underlie the most important activities of a university. Freedom for the scholar, with no restraints from government or politics, church, tradition, technology, etc. In return," he continues, "the scholar's greatest responsibility is objectivity. The faculty member must bend over backward to be objective, to keep out his own biases." Biases sometimes take other forms. Dr. Elliott worries that "Freedom is greatly endangered when an institution actually prevents a speaker from delivering his message; this represents a loss to scholarship that just should not occur. . . . There should be no limits on academic freedom."

And, finally: "I am most comfortable in the independent institution. Freedom, in its broadest dimension, can for me exist only in the independent institution which is, indeed, found in the independent society," he concludes.

In George Washington University, Lloyd Elliott found such an institution. The results of that association between man and university reflect great credit upon both.

Throughout the years, GW has presented honorary doctorates to a disparate group of distinguished individuals — from Lee lacocca to John Fitzgerald Kennedy to Mstislav Rostropovich to Warren Burger. Above, Dr. Elliott adds the name of Lady Bird Johnson to the list.

Twenty-two years and more than 150 commencements later . . . .

Campaign for George Washington

Report from the General Chairman, Oliver T. Carr, Jr.

By June 1987, total gifts and commitments to the Campaign for George Washington passed the half-way point of $37.5 million. This milestone was reached just one year after the Campaign's public announcement and less than two years since its approval by the Board of Trustees.

When more than two hundred Campaign volunteers gathered at The Willard Inter-Continental Hotel this summer for a celebration, their justifiable sense of achievement and pride was exceeded only by their enthusiasm for the work still ahead.

There is cause for celebration and optimism. The Campaign's progress has surpassed the expectations of its planners. This is due to the hard work of our president, trustees and others. But more importantly, it is evidence of widespread support for the university's goal of academic excellence.

This was a year of transition. Bob Perry (SBGA '70) stepped down as Annual Fund National Chairman after five years of service, a period in which alumni annual giving more than doubled. He is succeeded by George Olsen (Law '75) who has served as Law School Chairman for the past two years. And, of course, we are entering the final year with President Elliott, whose dedication to the Campaign has been a major element in its success.

The job is not finished. We have three years and more than $37 million to go. Major leadership gifts, many of which were committed to the Campaign at the outset, will not be as readily available in the coming months. What will be required is ever broader participation, as the University's many alumni and friends in Washington and around the country join in moving the Campaign — and GW — ahead. As the following pages indicate, they already have demonstrated their willingness to do so.

The Luther Rice Society

Chairman: Thaddeus A. Lindner, BA '51

Luther Rice was pre-eminent among the founders of The George Washington University. The Luther Rice Society was organized in 1968 to perpetuate the memory and ideals of Luther Rice and to give proper recognition to all those who have continued to give exceptional financial support to the University. To provide for such recognition, those who give or pledge gifts of $10,000 or more are granted lifetime membership in one of four associates categories. Annual membership is extended to contributors of $1,000 or more.

The George Washington University is deeply indebted to the members of the Luther Rice Society for their leadership and for the high standards they have set for all alumni and friends of the University. Their generosity ensures the University's continued growth and development.

Financial Reports

Telephone (202) 676-6145

September 16, 1987

To the President and the Board of Trustees The George Washington University Washington, D.C. 20052

Submitted herewith is the Financial Report of the University for the year ended June 30, 1987. The report includes a statement of financial condition at June 30, 1987 and June 30, 1986 (Balance Sheet-Exhibit A) and a summary of the financial activity for the years then ended (Statement of Changes in Fund Balances-Exhibit B). Price Waterhouse has examined these statements (Exhibits A & B) and the "Notes to the Financial Statements" and its report is included.

A condensed summary highlighting the financial results of the past year is included followed by the audited Financial Statements and the report of Price Waterhouse.

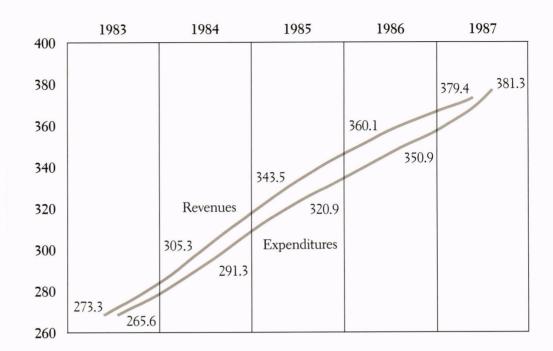

Respectfully submitted,

Ralph J. Olmo Comptroller

Notes to the Financial Statements

For the years ended June 30, 1987 and 1986

Accounting Policies The financial statements of the University are prepared on an accrual basis of accounting in accordance with the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants' audit guide for colleges and universities. The University's accounting policies with respect to certain items, for which alternate standards are recognized, are enumerated below.

Restricted gifts are reported as current income in the period received rather than in the period used.

Endowment income, excluding gains and losses on sales of investments, is reported and distributed as earned. Gains and losses on the sales of investments are accumulated with the Endowment Funds' principal balance.

The University does not record depreciation of physical properties except for Hospital buildings and equipment. Hospital depreciation charges are not included in current expenses but are recorded in the Plant Funds as reductions of asset value and Net Investment in Plant.

Interest incurred during construction is capitalized as part of the cost of capital projects.

Note 1—Valuation of Investments Investments are stated at cost, or, in the case of donated investments, at the fair market value at date of acquisition.

Note 2—Temporary Advances These advances represent the temporary use of Current Funds pending the receipt of monies from other anticipated funding sources including grant and loan agreements and the receipt of pledged gifts from various donors.

Note 3—Group Contract Settlements Hospital charges paid under patient care group contracts are subject to audit and retroactive settlements by third party payors. Estimates for the 1987 and 1986 settlements under these agreements have been provided.

Note 4—Self Insurance Trust Effective July 1, 1979, the University established a self-insurance trust for professional liability claims. The trust fund, which is held by independent trustees, is funded based upon actuarial determination. In addition, the University maintains umbrella coverage for amounts in excess of the basic self-insurance program. Possible differences between the amounts charged to expense and included in the self-insurance reserve and the ultimate costs of settled claims and claims expenses are not considered significant in relation to the University's overall financial position and changes in its fund balances for the years ended June 30, 1987 and 1986.

Note 5—Endowment and Similar Funds Assets of Endowment Funds, excluding Funds Held in Trust by Others, had book values at June 30, 1987 and 1986 of $151,638,566 and $123,016,542 and market values of $217,392,243 and $208,083,097 respectively. These funds include 55 funds which are separately invested and 414 funds which are invested on a pooled basis. A summary of book and market values, as of June 30, 1987 and 1986 together with unit value information and earnings per unit in the Consolidated Endowment Funds, is presented below:

maturing at various dates through 2001	21,934,059	23,478,472
due May, 2021	5,847,948	2,154,368
Total Plant Funds	161,497,007	165,334,840
Total Bonds and Notes	$172,775,894	$177,529,782

Trust Indentures of the above Building Bond issues require the University to deposit and maintain specified amounts in trustee controlled accounts as Repair, Maintenance and Debt Service Reserves. In satisfaction of these requirements, $17,721,383 and $17,660,044 were included in Deposits with the Trustees at June 30, 1987 and 1986.

Interest on indebtedness for the years ended June 30, 1987 and 1986 was either capitalized during construction or expensed. The amounts capitalized have been offset by interest earned on temporary investment of indebtedness proceeds when such proceeds are restricted for use in future construction.

Note 9—Current Funds—Restricted Activity Restricted revenues amounted to $31,127,061 and $26,521,843 and restricted expenditures amounted to $29,496,081 and $25,538,224 for the years ended June 30, 1987 and 1986 respectively.

Note 10—Pension Plans Full-time faculty and staff are eligible for participation in the University's retirement annuity program. The program is administered by independent fiduciaries to whom all funds are transferred for investment purposes and annuity payments. Individual contracts issued under the plan provide for full and immediate vesting of both the University's and the participants' contributions. In addition, certain retirees whose employment pre-dated establishment of the retirement annuity program receive supplemental past service benefits which are funded on a current basis. University contributions and direct payments to retirees amounted to $8,348,642 in 1987 and $7,569,475 in 1986.

Note 11—The George Washington University Health Plan On March 2, 1987, the University acquired the 80% ownership interest in the George Washington University Health Plan (the Health Plan) not previously held by the University for approximately $7,500,000. Approximately $7,000,000 of the purchase price has been assigned to the value of the Health Plan's membership list and is being amortized over a five year period.

Note 12—Contingencies The University is a defendant in certain pending civil suits. In the opinion of the University, the University has a good defense to the claims not covered by insurance.

To the President and the Board of Trustees The George Washington University Washington, D.C.

In our opinion, the accompanying balance sheet and the related statement of changes in fund balances (Exhibits A and B) present fairly the financial position of The George Washington University at June 30, 1987 and 1986, and the changes in its fund balances for the years then ended, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles consistently applied. Our examinations of these statements were made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.
